

July 30, 2003

World Briefing | Asia: Nepal: Rebel Leaders Freed

The authorities freed three top Maoist rebels in an effort to revive stalled peace talks intended to end an increasingly violent revolt. The move came a day after the Maoists, fighting to replace the constitutional monarchy with a communist republic, gave the government until Thursday to fulfill five demands to resume the talks, stalled since May, including the release of the three rebels.

Copyright 2007 The New York Times Company