As the date of the 2013 general elections in Zimbabwe draws near, political dissidents and MDC-T members supporting current Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai have heard much from the dominating ZANU-PF party which the infamous incumbent president Robert Mugabe leads. EU-blacklisted War Veterans' Association leader Jabulani Sibanda has been preaching hate and violence to audiences.

Sibanda has raged in 2 hour lectures against Prime Minister Tsvangirai and his party calling him an agent of the Devil.

Sibanda has also threatened violence in Zimbabwe if ZANU-PF loses the upcoming elections. Sibanda uses a combination of religious and political rhetoric that endorses Mugabe as a "man of God" and the ZANU-PF as the "one party under God".

Jabulani Sibanda also referred to the UN & EU in his lectures saying that "these whites who have imposed sanctions on us have a tendency of dictating to us" and that he "hate whites" though claiming he was not "racist but a realist".

While the election is mainly between Tsvangirai and Mugabe, Sibanda also criticized Dumiso Dabengwa, Livemore Madhuku and Simba Makoni, the other candidates running in the elections.

The elections are due to take place on the 29th of June this year under a new constitution that was ratified by a nationwide referendum with an astonishing number of almost 95% of 'yes' votes in the country.

The new constitution states that the Zimbabwean President can only serve two 5 year terms in office without the power to veto Parliament's legislation.

Many have voiced doubt as to whether or not the elections will be fair for the opposing candidates.
